

Engaging with us

COHRED works with countries to build the skills and systems required for research for health and innovation. We partner with governments, research institutions, alliances and partnerships, as well as civil society organisations, building on expertise from around the world. There are many different ways to engage with us.

- Engage us to assist with building a strong research for health and innovation system in your country
- Partner with us to strengthen countries' research for health and innovation systems
- Attend our seminars and workshops to learn and network
- Join our meetings to network and share experiences and reach concrete outcomes
- Communicate and advocate with us for increased attention to research for health and innovation in low- and middle-income countries.
